MSU LIBRARIES

FACULTY BOOK COLLECTION

BOOKS, MULTIMEDIA
WORKS, MUSICAL SCORES
2011

The Faculty Book Collection was established by the MSU Libraries in 1998 to recognize and honor the scholarly work of MSU faculty members who have written, edited, or translated a book or musical score; contributed to a multimedia work; or participated in a professionally recorded musical performance.

Wherever possible, the library acquires two copies of each work: one for the Main Library or appropriate branch library, and the other for the MSU Faculty Book Collection, located on the first floor of the Main Library near the Director's Office.

Titles for the collection are identified by the subject librarians who serve as liaisons to MSU colleges and departments, and through extensive database searches using current lists of MSU faculty provided by the Provost's office. Works by retired faculty and by academics staff are included whenever they are identified.

Authors with new works published in 2011 are listed in this program, and are our honored guests at the MSU Faculty Authors Reception for 2012.

Espresso Book Machine

Print a Book at the MSU Libraries

The MSU Libraries now have an Espresso Book Machine (EBM) available for MSU faculty, students, and the public. The EBM offers on-site, on-demand book printing—a service with dozens of potential applications.

The EBM prints high-quality paperback books, indistinguishable from those produced on conventional presses. More than seven million titles are currently available for printing in the On Demand Books catalog.

The EBM is also available for custom printing projects. Single volumes can range from 40 to 800 pages in a variety of trim sizes. Color covers and black & white interiors are standard, with color inserts available as an option. Both cover and interior are produced from PDF files.

The Espresso Book Machine opens up a world of possibilities for MSU faculty and students. Many have already used the EBM:

- Playwright and librettist Sandra Seaton used the EBM to print an edition of her drama Music History, after its MSU premier during her term as writer-in-residence for the College of Law. Directors who inquire about staging her work will now receive an EBM-printed copy to read.
- Eugene Dillenburg, who teaches in Art, Art History, and Design, wanted his students to use the program Virtual Gallerie to design museum exhibits—but the software is complex, and has minimal documentation. Dillenburg prepared a user's manual for his students and had it printed and bound on the EBM.
- Katy Meyers, a graduate student in Anthropology, needed a reference copy of a dissertation to use during an archaeological dig, when field conditions would prevent using a laptop. An EBM-printed copy was a convenient solution.
- The School of Planning, Design & Construction recently offered a training program on the housing and real estate industry for China's Ministry of Land and Resources. They used the EBM to produce workbooks for participants.
- The publisher of William Schoenl's book New Perspectives on the Vietnam War was no longer able to keep it in print. There is still a demand for the volume, so Schoenl updated it and produced a new edition on the EBM.

Faculty members who attended a focus group on the EBM had many other ideas about potential uses: conference proceedings, coursepacks, supplemental data from research projects, student portfolios for job interviews, and printed copies of digitized primary documents were just a few.

The MSU Libraries are already implementing the last suggestion. Printed copies of historic American cookbooks from Special Collections—previously digitized for the Feeding America website—are now in production. The first volume, a reproduction of the first American cookbook, is already available.

“We are delighted to bring this new, exciting technology to campus and to the local community,” says Cliff Haka, director of the MSU Libraries. “The Espresso Book Machine is a terrific example of how digital technology can benefit our users, especially those who prefer to have a physical copy of a book.”

The Espresso Book Machine is located in the Main Library Copy Center on 2 West. Staff members are happy to give demonstrations. To plan a custom printing project, please contact Kyle Pressley, EBM coordinator, at 517.884.0827 or ebm@mail.lib.msu.edu.
